

Financial markets little change ahead of tomorrow's FOMC minutes

- There have been slight movements in the financial markets, pending the publication of the FOMC minutes and further details over the ongoing US-China trade negotiations. Following last week's trade talks in Beijing, further negotiations between the two major economies started today in the US, while high-level meetings will take place once again at the end of the week (see). In a context where global trade disputes remained in the spotlight, today the WTO have reported that ongoing trade tensions could lead to an even weaker growth in global economy (see).
- Equity markets showed mild movements. In its first session of the week, US stocks opened slightly up favoured by strong earnings report (see), while European stocks declined with the banking sector under pressure once again amid the release of disappointing results from a major European bank (see).
- In the first trading day of the week, the US Treasury 10Y yield inched down ahead of tomorrow's FOMC minutes. In Europe, the release of weak economic indicators for Italy dragged down the 10Y Bund yield (see) while the slightly better-than-expected German confidence indicator had muted impact on markets (see). Peripheral risk premia was unchanged.
- In FX markets, the USD depreciated while the EUR broke the 1.13 USD/EUR level in the early session after disappointing data but as the session went on, it was able to recover. The JPY ended flat despite Bank of Japan's Kuroda signaling further policy easing to support its economy (see). Most EM currencies appreciated, with the sole exception of the ARS, while the rest of Latam currencies benefited from the stability in oil prices.
