

Market Comment

Caution ahead of an eventful week. FOMC Preview

- Investors will watch closely the FOMC's rate decision on Wednesday. Despite the better-than-expected growth of the U.S. GDP in the second quarter driven by consumption -both private and public-, the underlying detail was more consistent with a more pronounced slowdown. Net exports and inventories whipsawed to the downside, whereas consumption is unlikely to continue expanding at well above average rates. In this context, a 25bp cut in the Fed funds rate this Wednesday is a virtual certainty, while markets expectations of 3 cuts in 2019 remains high, around 58%.
- On the data front, it is an eventful week where investors will keep an eye on employment data in the U.S., the 2Q19 GDP and July's advanced CPI in the Eurozone and PMI data in China. Moreover, the Dallas Fed activity index rose in July although slightly less than expected and remaining in negative territory (-6.3, consensus -6.0, previous month -12.1).
- Regarding U.S.-China trade talks, which will resume tomorrow in Shanghai, expectations for any breakthrough are low. U.S. president Trump said on Friday that China might wait until after the 2020 U.S. election to sign a trade agreement, hoping to negotiate more favorable terms with a different U.S. president. On the other hand, Trump denies the developing economy status of China at the WTO and set a 90-day deadline to see if the WTO has taken actions in the matter.
- Sovereign bond yield inched down across the board, ahead of Wednesday's FOMC meeting. However, yield on 10Y gilts declined as fears of a no-deal Brexit increase. Elsewhere, Italy's risk premium widened slightly, due to concerns about snap elections, as is getting hard for the government coalition to find common ground in some relevant decisions
- In FX markets, the USD extended its gains, although it slightly depreciated against the CHF. Moreover, the GBP weakened significantly to its lowest level since March 2017, after U.K. officials said on Sunday that new Prime Minister Boris Johnson's government was working on the assumption that the EU would not renegotiate its Brexit deal, increasing the possibility of a disorderly exit. The recent surge in GBPUSD implied volatility mirrored the increasing markets angst about a disorderly Brexit.
- Stock markets fluctuated in a narrow range amid corporate earnings and M&A events.
