

Market Comment

All eyes on trade talks

- Market risk appetite improved, although volatility remains ahead of the trade talks conclusion. There has been confusing news-flow since yesterday, with China offering to buy more U.S. agricultural goods if the U.S. refuses to hike tariffs, while the U.S. might include some commitment in terms of the exchange rate in the deal. Separately, U.S. President Trump said he will meet China Vice Premier Liu He tomorrow.
- On the data front, U.S. core CPI undershot estimates in September (0.1% MoM, consensus 0.2% MoM, previous 0.3% MoM). Meanwhile, U.S. employment showed some resilience as its jobless claims fell more than expected. In Europe, French industrial production fell unexpectedly in August (-0.9% MoM, consensus 0.3% MoM, previous 0.3% MoM), alongside British industrial production (-0.6% MoM, consensus 0.1% MoM, previous 0.1% MoM).
- Both the Fed and ECB minutes of their September meetings had a muted impact on markets. The Fed's minutes suggested that only a minority is expecting a further easing, while market expectations of a Fed rate cut by the end of this month hover at around 75%. Moreover, there was a long debate regarding the inflation framework, and certain consensus is building around the adoption of an average inflation target. There was practically no debate regarding the optimal level of bank balance sheet.
- Yield on sovereign bonds soared on hopes of a limited U.S.-China trade deal, especially the back-end yields (both 10Y UST and German bond yields +8bps). UK bonds led the losses with the 10Y yield dropping significantly by 13bps driven by trade and Brexit deal optimism, while peripheral risk premia were flat.
- The dollar weakened (DXY index -0.4%), while the yuan appreciated against the USD (+0.2%) amid the potential currency pact between the U.S. and China. The JPY underperformed its G10 peers and the euro gained (+0.4%) despite weak industrial production data in the Eurozone. The sterling jumped (+1.4%) on prospects of a deal between the two leaders of the UK and Ireland. Elsewhere, EM currencies benefited from a better market risk appetite with the TRY leading the gains (+0.8%).
- In commodities, gold prices declined (-0.7%), whereas oil prices extended yesterday's gains (Brent +0.7%), despite US crude oil inventories declined less than expected last week.
- Global equities recovered from recent losses (both S&P 500 and EuroStoxx 50 +0.9%), especially cyclical sectors with the banking sector rising 2.5% on average.
