

Market Comment

Cautious optimism

- Trade and Brexit negotiations remain the main market drivers, but without additional news on this front, financial markets moved sideways pending new developments.
- The UK Parliament is going to decide today whether to go ahead with debating the Withdrawal Agreement Bill, which aims to turn the Brexit deal into law. In this context, UK PM Boris Johnson threatened to move straight to an election if members of Parliament do not back him tonight and vote for another delay.
- On the trade front positives prospect continues. China suggested that preliminary negotiations on trade agreements are in an advanced stage, which makes probable both countries to sign the agreement next month. White House economic adviser Kudlow stated that there is a possibility that the December tariffs plan will be canceled if trade negotiations continue to progress smoothly. Separately, China sought the WTO approval for $2.4 billion in retaliatory sanctions as trade counter-measures against the United States.
- Today's U.S. economic data released disappointed. The U.S. existing home sales fell more than expected in September to the slowest pace in three months as prices climbed (5.38m, consensus 5.45m, previous 5.5m).
- Sovereign bond yields fell across the board, especially in Europe, retreating yesterday's increases as Brexit uncertainty remains high. The yield on the 10Y Italian bonds fell sharply by 6bps with its risk premium narrowing by 4bps.
- The USD were broadly flat waiting for next steps in main markets drivers (trade negotiation and Brexit) appreciated (DXY index +0.1%), while the pound led the losses (-0.1%) against its G10 peers ahead of the UK lawmakers' decision on the Withdrawal Agreement Bill. Moreover, EM currencies advanced in general (FXJPMECS +0.2%) with the Brazilian real outperforming others (USDBRL +1%), but the Chilean peso consolidated recent depreciational, as the country's political turmoil continues.
- U.S. stocks inched up amid some strong earnings (S&P 500 +0.2%), while European stocks were mixed with the IBEX 35 index leading the losses.
