Equity markets to record highs although bond yields see limited gains

Equity markets slightly extended the increases across the board during the week, underpinned by the final agreement on the U.S.-China phase one agreement, the improvement in the U.S. activity data (retail sales and regional PMI) and mixed company earnings. However, European indices were initial laggards, dragged by auto stocks and banking sectors, but hit new record highs on Friday after reassuring Chinese GDP data. Equity volatility remained well contained (VIX around 12), underscoring the risk-on mood across markets.

The U.S. and China signed the much-awaited phase one trade deal on January 15th in Washington. Effective next month, the deal commits China to: 1) buy an additional $200 billion worth of U.S. goods and services during 2020 and 2021, over its baseline purchases in 2017, 2) refrain from currency manipulation, 3) expedite financial sector liberalization, 4) tighten oversight against IP theft, and 5) refrain from forced technology transfer. In return, the U.S. has agreed to halve tariffs on $120 billion worth of Chinese imports to 7.5%, while keeping 25% duties on $250 bn worth of goods unchanged.

On this week's data front, the U.S. economy remained strong but is losing momentum, while the Eurozone's hard data point to stabilization in 4Q19 and China's high frequency activity data signals a slight recovery. The U.S. consumption expectations lost steam, tempering yesterday's optimism after upbeat retail sales data. The U.S. housing is beginning to show signs of strength, but building permits weakened. Industrial production fell more than expected (-0.3% MoM; Cons: -0.2%; Prev: 0.8% revised from 1.1%) with the capacity utilization index declining marginally. In the Eurozone, December's annual inflation held steady (1.3% YoY; Cons: 1.3% YoY; Prev: 1.3%YoY) driven by an increased contribution of transportation sector. Meanwhile, China's full year 2019 GDP growth slowed to a near 30-year low of 6.1% (6.6% in 2018), although within the official target range of 6-6.5%.

Sovereign yields also recovered some ground this week. However, the upside in yields was limited, and safe-haven yield failed to claw back last Friday's declines, which took place on the back of weaker payroll, suggesting investors assessed that the current economic reports reflect the fact that the economy is neither running too hot nor too cold. The European peripheral faces supply pressure, but Spain's and Italy's bonds attracted a record demand from real cash investors (53 bn in orders Spain's 10Y syndicate bond and 43 bn in Italy's 30Y bond). Meanwhile, the disappointing outcomes from UK retail sales, and GDP data have weighed on the 10Y UK gilt, boosting the likelihood of an imminent BoE rate cut (around 75%).

In FX markets, G-10 currencies were broadly steady, with the JPY falling to reach seven-month lows. Meanwhile, the USD marginally appreciated. The details of the U.S.-China phase one trade deal weighed on LatAm currencies (BRL and COP -2%, CLP -1%), whereas they boosted EM Asian FX, while REMB extended its appreciation. The MXN slightly appreciated after the U.S. senate backed the USMCA. The TRY timely appreciated after the CBRT cut interest rates in line with expectations.
