China flash PMI signals further weakness in manufacturing

The HSBC flash PMI estimate for June was released today, showing a further moderation, to 48.1% from 48.4% in May, remaining below the 50% expansion threshold for an eighth consecutive month. The export orders component of the PMI weakened significantly, to 45.9% from 48.5% in May. The outturn shows that underlying growth momentum in China remains weak, although we believe that it is likely to bottom out this quarter on supportive monetary and fiscal policies. The final HSBC estimate will be released on July 2, and has consistently been below the official PMI due to its smaller sample size and orientation toward export-oriented firms. We expect the official PMI for June, to be released on July 1, to remain just above 50.

Easing of China's QFII restrictions: latest sign of liberalization

As reported in the Wall Street Journal, the China Security Regulation Commission yesterday published a draft of its Administrative Rules for Qualified Foreign Institutional Investors. The new rules would further relax restrictions on QFII investors by lowering entry barriers for QFII investors and expanding the scope of permissible activities, including investment in the interbank market.

Hong Kong's May headline CPI inflation moderated to 4.3% y/y

Hong Kong's May inflation slowed to 4.3% y/y from 4.7% in April, in line with the market's expectation. Although recent inflation outturns have moderated on slowing growth, we expect inflationary pressures to persist in the coming months (BBVA forecast: 4.7% y/y for 2012) due to tight labor markets and still-high housing prices.

Briefly noted:

- Taiwan's central bank left its benchmark rate unchanged at its Q2 monetary policy meeting. The decision was based on balancing a deteriorating growth outlook against recent inflationary pressures that are due to rising housing prices.
